STUDIOS

Known for his contemporary style, mixed media artist Pako Pablos is recognized internationally for his stylistic approach by industry and social icons.

From world class athletes to cutting edge musicians and entertainment figures, his artistic commentary on pop culture through the use of digital art, painting with acrylics and the creation of images in pastels is gaining widespread exposure and popularity.

From an early age, I have always been captivated by the human form. Most of my work reflects this fascination and I paint what inspires me... portraits of the people who take me out of myself.

My perspective on life is very much in the here and now, as is shown in the contemporary subject matter of my work. I paint charismatic figures who influence modern culture. Each has a unique essence at the core of their appeal and that is what I work to capture.

I consider the true nature of my subject and work to develop a sense of who they really are, to get at the heart of what they represent even beyond what is most commonly known of them.

I paint with pastels on acrylic using only my fingertips to blend and merge color and texture, bringing the portraits to life through plays on shadow and light, allowing form and shape to evolve as I meld the mediums.

Each is done on a large canvas, enabling viewers to "fall in" to the painting more deeply. The scale presents a close-up of the subject, someone who we would rarely get the chance to study in person, thus creating a sense of intimacy from which it is hard to pull away.

For me, and hopefully for those who appreciate my work, the characters I paint are more than subjects. They are each a story told on canvas.
